DEATH OF THE SCULPTOR OF THE STATUE OF KAMEHAMEHA.

We clip from Boston papers the following particulars in relation to the artist Thomas R. Gould, recently deceased:

"Thomas R. Gould, the American sculptor, died on Saturday at his home in Florence, at the age of sixty-three years. He was born in Boston, and in early life was engaged in business here with his brother John, now in New Orleans. After the war he saw the opportunity he had long sought for going abroad to study sculpture. His family accompanied him, and he bought a pleasant home in Florence, where they have since lived. Mr. Gould modeled his first figure in the studio of Seth Cheney, the only master he ever had. In Italy he worked diligently and chiseled many fine pieces among them 'The West Wind,' which was copied for several galleries, 'Cleopatra,' 'Timon of Athens,' 'Ariel,' and 'John Hancock,' which was exhibited at the Centennial Exposition, and now stands in the town hall at Lexington. His statue of Governor Andrew, which the Grand Army of the Republic presented him to sculpt for erection in the Hingham Cemetery, is one of his well-known works. Two of his ideal studies, 'Christ' and 'Satan,' will be remembered as having formed a part of the Boston Athenaeum collection; the 'Ghost in Hamlet' added to his reputation, and 'Steam' and 'Electricity,' two colossal heads, placed in the vestibule of the Boston Herald Building, have been pronounced strongly typical of these two great energies. Among the numerous portrait busts executed by Gould may be mentioned that of Emerson, in the Harvard Library, William Monroe, in the Concord Library, John A. Andrew, belonging to the widow of the great statesman, and the elder Booth, in Booth's Theatre, New York. The deceased was a brother of the late Samuel Gould of this city. He visited his native country a few months ago, and was at that time in excellent health."

THOMAS R. GOULD.
(From a Sermon by Rev. C. A. Bartol.)

"How can I better close my discourse than with an example, that of Thomas R. Gould, the sculptor, a member of this West church from his childhood and dear friend of that saintly artist, Seth Cheney, whom he has just followed, passing away in Florence, Italy, he said: 'I take my step to get to God—I begin with him.' His filial piety embraced in one, his father in heaven and his mother on earth. His moral purity was no less marked. No woman was ever known for knowing this man. He corrupted not, but cleansed. His faith, like vision, made his holy life. This life had been largely a struggle with Satan, and ended after a storm. The storm, Seth, on which he was a passenger, encountered terrible weather on the way to Liverpool, her shafts and propeller were broken, and she was for three days and nights she was thrown betwixt the crest and hollow of the waves. He had himself fastened on deck, loved of nature as he was, to admire the indescribable magnificence of the scene and sight, as his long prophetic beard tossed to and fro in the wind. He wrote home that the spectacle would have been a delight even to one who was dying. Did the elements, God's servants, call him? Did a chill from the tempest strike to the heart of that stout, handsome, ruddy-checked man? He reached port safe. He may, as I sometimes thought, have been weary a little of the voyage of existence, as of that over the sea. But he longed for and saw another harbor."

The last notable work of this distinguished sculptor was the statue of Kamehameha the Founder of the Hawaiian Kingdom. This fine statue in bronze was lost at sea on board the German bark G. F. Haendel, which was burned at sea and sank off Port Stanley, Falkland Islands, Nov. 15, 1880. Full insurance was recovered; a replica ordered by the Legislative Committee having the matter in charge; and Mr. Gould was engaged on this replica at the time of his death. In a letter dated Nov. 6, Mr. Gould writes: "At Paris, the artist of His Majesty (Kamehameha I.) a fresh and handsome cast in the hands of the founders, and a promise from them to finish the work in May. I shall do my best to have both statue and tablets ready in that month for shipment." A cable message was received by J. W. Austin, Esq., Agent of the Monument Committee in Boston, Dec. 1st, as follows: "Bronze now casting, changes making according to Gibson's last letter. Billie well advanced." Marshall Gould, the son of the late artist is now in Paris superintending the finish of the statue—so that there will be no delay in the work, notwithstanding the sad demise of the eminent designer of the statue.

Thomas R. Gould, the artist, whom we had the honor to know personally, was a gentleman of most genial and courteous character, as well as an artist of high attainments. It is rare to find such fine and noble character associated with superior gifts of genius. We trust ere long to see his fine statue set up in our city. It will be an inspiration to Hawaiians. Nationality and country will have a deeper significance for them, as they gaze upon the magnificent figure of the hero of this race. And thus the genius of Gould will continue to inspire and teach in Hawaii in everlasting bronze.

to distant dependencies as England has done should recognize the right of the United States to be masters of the canal, it being the highway from one part of the States to another. His objection to a joint guarantee of neutrality by the States and European powers is short and to the point, viz: "the right to assert implies the right to dissent." The recent appointment of Freyhaugen in Blaine's stead, and the guarded tone of the Presidential message on this subject are accepted by the English press as a token that the President is not in entire accord with "Blaine's Spread-Eagles." The San Francisco Chronicle says on this subject: "There is nothing present or in sight in our relations with Great Britain to demand the abrogation of the Clayton-Bulwer Treaty. In fact, when the people of the United States come to a thorough understanding of that treaty they will demand its retention and full enforcement. To abrogate it would prevent England from using her naval power to blockade the canal in case of war with us. It would invite her to do so, by releasing her from the obligation of the second article, which binds her not to do it."

There had been some very lively debates in the U. S. Senate on the subject of Civil Service Reform. Voorhees of Indiana introduced a resolution which "proposes an amendment to the Constitution, providing that all Postmasters, Revenue Collectors, Judges, Marshals and United States District Attorneys for the District Courts of the United States shall be elected by the people of the State in which their duties are performed, and in such manner as the Legislature of the States shall provide."

Senator Miller had introduced his Nicaragua canal bill. It provides for a guarantee of 3 per cent to the company by the United States for 20 years after completion of the canal. The proposed maximum capital is $100,000,000.

From Ireland the news received from day to day has a monotonous sameness. A considerable seizure of arms and ammunition was made in Dublin on the 17th inst. and a telegram from Dublin says that a prison is being specially prepared in view of contemplated arrests of ladies who have taken lately a prominent part as Leaguers. A telegram from Dublin 19th December says: "The organization against the payment of rents is becoming still more formidable. It is regarded as much of a crime to go into the Land Court as to pay rent. A list of persons who have been served with notices and those suspected of paying rents are posted at the chapel and other places where they can be seen, and although the police fear them, they are soon posted again."

His Royal Highness Prince Leopold, youngest son of Her Majesty Queen Victoria, is betrothed to the Princess Helene Waldeck.

In the German Reichstag the measures of the Government have lately repeatedly been defeated. The last press telegram from Berlin says: "Remors of the approaching dissolution of the Reichstag are considered to have been strengthened by an article in the North German Gazette which points out the attitude of the Reichstag since his opening last week."

There is much excitement in Panama on account of the measures taken by the principal foreign merchants in opposition to the proposed increase in the canal toll. The Government is very obstinate, and it is feared unless a compromise is effected that there will be lively times here in the next few weeks.

From Russia the news continues to be of the most dismal character. A fourth person implicated in the assassination of the late Emperor is now in custody. This man, Emilianoff states that on the 13th March he was walking in the quay of the canal without sighting a single policeman. When the second bomb burst under the Emperor's feet, and he fell bleeding profusely, a man of the people rushed up, drew out his knife, caught the dying Sovereign in his right arm, and held him until other help came. This man was Emilianoff. Under his left arm he had all the time a bomb similar to that used by the assassin. The prosecutor asked: "And had he the bomb there and then?" "Yes," said Emilianoff in his written testimony; "It was I who was first to assist the Emperor to get into the sledge. None of your police hounds dared to come near him until I took him in my arms. When we had seen the Emperor driven off, and expired, we returned to our lodgings congratulating ourselves on the day's work."

The Emperor has found out who has placed the threatening letters and proclamations in his pocket-book and pocket handkerchiefs. During the last three weeks he set a watch in his room, and caught a woman who had been in the service of the Emperor for the last eight years. She was in the act of placing the letter in his pocket-book. This letter reminds the Emperor that he has only a few weeks of life before him. The woman wept and declared she had done this out of gratitude, and with a conviction that she was averting a catastrophe to the sovereign whom she loved so well. Nevertheless she refused to give the name of the man who supplied her with the letters and proclamations.

Clerical journals published in Rome repeat the statements that the question of the Pope's departure is seriously mooted. It is said that his Holiness has consulted the Bishops who came to Rome to attend the recent canonizing ceremony, but this has been contradicted by one of these prelates who says that the Pope's residence on the subject particularly struck them.

The following telegrams are of interest:—
MRS. LINCOLN BLEND, Chicago, December 17. "Letters from Mrs. Abraham Lincoln to her friends in this city reveal the sad state of her afflicted lady has completely lost the use of her eyesight. She is unable to write and her letters are written at dictation, by an attendant. She does not say but crossed the new wire, and how serious it may be expected to prove. Mrs. Lincoln says her eyes are so weak that she cannot see. Beyond that fact nothing more is known of her condition. No trouble has ever been experienced heretofore by Mrs. Lincoln with her eyes. She has been accustomed to sitting in a dark room, which may have caused the weakness. No mention of her general health was made, except that she is very weak."

BALLOON ACCIDENT.—London, December 11.—A Government balloon in charge of Captain Templeton, accompanied by Walter Powell, M. P. for Malmesbury, and a Mr. Gardner ascended yesterday and descended at Bridgport. The balloon struck the ground heavily and Gardner and Captain Templeton were thrown and injured. The balloon rose with power and was seen again to descend into the sea. Nothing has since been seen or heard of the balloon or Powell.

THE VIENNA DISASTER.—Vienna, December 19.—A later official list of the victims of the theatre fire estimates the number missing at 620.

PRESIDENT ARTHUR in his message to Congress gives our little Kingdom a special notice, as follows:—

"HAWAIIAN AFFAIRS.
"The King of the Hawaii, on the course of his homeward return after a journey around the world, has lately visited this country. While our relations with that Kingdom are friendly, this Government has viewed with concern the efforts to seek the dismemberment of the Hawaiian population of the Islands from outward sources to a degree which may impair their native sovereignty and independence, in which the United States was among the first to testify a lively interest."

The President seems to have "concern" about the "degree" or extent; and not the quality or character of our immigration. He fears that the "native sovereignty and independence," in which the United States has testified such "a lively interest," may be impaired by the coming of many "refugees" from outward sources, hence he will not regard with favor the mission of Mr. Carter to bring Portuguese here by the wholesale. We are glad to notice the kindly expression of regard for Hawaiian independence; and trust it will not be impaired by the Power which claims to have first proffered recognition, by being the first to dictate what shall be its course in regard to a measure of domestic policy.
